Franco-Espo - Francophone Catholic Pride Event

By Chloe Kneer - Friday, June 7 students from Ecole St. Joseph and Ecole secondaire catholique Franco-Ouest in Espanola were joined by students and staff from schools in Elliot Lake, Spanish, and Blind River to celebrate Francophone Catholic pride.

The day kicked off with a pep rally in the morning at St. Joseph, followed by a parade to Red McCarthy Park in Espanola where a barbecue and games awaited. There was also bingo for seniors. The event is an opportunity for students from kindergarten to grade 12 to celebrate the vitality of their faith, language, and culture.

Stage Fright Or Fright Of The Stage

Having spent a substantial amount of my career standing on a stage, I can attest to the fact that a lot of scary things happen when the audience is expecting one thing and another shows up instead.

A few weeks ago the wonderful English actress Helen Mirren stomped off a stage in London dressed as Queen Elizabeth II to confront a noisy group of drummers on the street in front of the theatre. It was reported that she used language not befitting a royal queen.

Years ago in the middle of a stage play in Sydney, Australia Kevin Spacey became unhinged by a cell phone that just kept ringing. Suddenly he stopped, turned to the woman rifling through her purse and said: "Tell them we're busy." In the same situation, Billy Crystal was not nearly as nice: "Put that phone on vibrate and shove it up your ---!"

I once found myself nervously standing next to New York mob informant undercover FBI agent Joe Pistone (a.k.a. Donnie Brasco) after he had refused an offer of armed security. Suddenly a very large man left his seat and walked quickly toward the stage ... and then right on by it. He had to take a leak.

I was standing on stage next to the late Mordecai Richler when the following exchange took place.

Women in audience: "Mr. Richler, I have purchased every book you have ever written and given them to my husband as gifts."

Richler: "Why, that's very kind. Thank you very much."

Woman: "And he hated every one of them."

It took two or three minutes for the laughter to die down. And when it did ... Richler: "I'll dedicate my next book to your husband and make sure there's lot of pictures in it."

I once stood on stage at the Thunder Bay library giving a reading from one of my books to an audience of one. Walter.

I remember standing on the stage of a yacht cruising the coast of Croatia delivering a travel/humour dissertation and the guy wearing a kilt and sitting in the front row tried to beat me to the punch line of every story I told. (He disappeared overboard late one night and they couldn't prove a thing!)

I shared a hotel stage with Margaret Trudeau who talked about her unstable behavior when she was self-medicating her bipolarism with alcohol and marijuana. Given the signal by her publicist that we needed to wrap things up and get her to her room, I told the audience to keep the book line moving fast because some of us wanted to go up to Margaret's room and smoke a little dope. Margaret Trudeau was not amused. I was standing next to writer David Gilmour who was talking about all his ex-wives, when the new one who had told him never to do that, got up and stomped out of the theatre and out of the building.

"What the hell happened? Was that my wife?" he asked while we were still in the midst of a question and answer session.

"I believe she prefers to be called Ex Number Four," I whispered. David Gilmour was not amused.

I stood on a stage at Hockley Valley Resort looking out at 150 people in the call centre business and as I passed the guy who had just introduced me as the after dinner speaker, he stopped and said: "All of these people were made redundant earlier today, they really need a good laugh." (Like doing stand-up in a morgue.)

Yes strange things happen on stage.

Last week at the National Victims of Crime Awareness Week Conference in Ottawa, Delta, B.C. police officer Kim Gramlich was about to unveil Caber, her secret weapon. This doe-eyed golden lab officer is a K9 trauma specialist. As far as trauma dogs, Caber is one of the country's very best at calming down victims of crime and making them feel secure and grounded again. Caber's talent for low-key, low-energy companionship is the key to his success with victims.

As his handler, Kim was about to introduce him to the large audience in a packed hall, Caber – I did mention he was really laid back, eh? – Caber who happened to be sound asleep during his introduction fell off the stage when his name was mentioned.

Maybe the dog is smarter than they give him credit for. Maybe he was mocking his own boring introduction or maybe he was making his move into slapstick humour.

My favourite stage story still is the one about American beauty Pia Zadora who had the same talent for acting as John Belushi had for ballet. On this night Pia was butchering The Diary of Anne Frank and during that scene where the Nazis with bayonets on the rifles were banging on the front door looking for Anne Frank, people in the audience stood up and yelled: "She's hiding in the attic!"

All the world really is a stage, a place of sudden surprises which are not always good ones.

In The Loop

2013 tax bills have been mailed and it is hoped that decisions Council made to curb spending have been kind to many of you. However, looming infrastructure upgrades, MPAC assessment increases, $4,000,000+ Domtar repayment debt and loss of $1.2M in yearly Domtar tax dollars will still present huge future challenges for all residents. During a Special Council Meeting on June 11th the auditors presented the 2012 financial statement. It does not appear that the Town has the necessary funds to repay the Domtar debt of $4 million plus. The Town has approximately $2.5 million in cash ($1.9M of this is our reserve fund). The decision on where the remainder of the money will come has not yet been made.

On a more positive note, monies have been set aside for an External Service Delivery Review in this year's budget. This independent review will provide guidelines on how to best reduce expenditures. The hope is that it will encompass ALL departments and will be completed BEFORE deliberations begin for the 2014 budget. In closing, we have been advised by the Office of the Privacy Commissioner that they have received our appeal notification concerning the Town's decision to deny our Freedom of Information Request for cheque registers. We expect to be contacted by the mediator in the near future to discuss this refusal to provide public information and will keep you up-to-date on the results.

Recipe

If you are having a Birthday party and it's too hot to bake a cake, this is a fun alternative that the kids will love. The recipe calls for "Birthday cake" ice cream, but any ice cream that's your favourite will do.

No-Bake Birthday Cake Ice Cream Cups

- 1 container (1.5 QT) of "Birthday Cake" ice cream or your favourite ice cream
- 1 tub (8 oz) Cool Whip, thawed
- 18 vanilla or chocolate Oreos
- Sprinkles

Line 2 muffin tins with 18 paper liners. Drop an Oreo cookie in the bottom of each liner and set aside. Scoop out the ice cream into a large bowl. Gently fold the Cool Whip into the softened ice cream until blended. Add a handful of sprinkles for extra colour and crunch, if you'd like. Scoop about 2 tablespoons of ice cream into each ice cream cup (2 cookie-dough scoops' worth) and gently smear the tops to fill the cups and smooth. Sprinkle liberally with rainbow sprinkles. Freeze the cups for about 4 hours or overnight, until solid. Peel back the wrappers and eat! Makes about 18.

Kids Korner

Bubble Snake Maker

- An empty plastic bottle
- A piece of terry cloth fabric (an old wash cloth or a tube sock)
- An elastic

Cut the bottom off the plastic bottle and cut the fabric into a large enough circle to cover the bottom of the bottle. Assemble your Bubble Snake Maker by putting the fabric over the open bottom of your bottle and securing it with the rubber band. Put some dish detergent in a bowl and add a little bit of water. Dip the terry cloth end into the soap mixture and gently blow into the mouth of your bottle. A slow, gentle stream of air will create a long chain of bubbles. (Don't inhale or you might get a mouthful of bubbles, yuck!)

Sacred Heart School Music Program Performs Concert

The Sacred Heart School music program, under the direction of Jodi Bourcier, recently held performances at the school to showcase the abundant talent of musicians and singers who participate in the curriculum. Playing at the concert were the Jazz Band, Glee Club, Grade 1-4 Choir, Beginning Band, and Future Glee Club. It was a bittersweet evening for Mrs. Bourcier, who has several students graduating Grade 8 this year. "Next year, we will very much be a 'new' band," she said of the band in particular, "but I look forward to these students coming back to Sacred Heart to do many volunteer hours helping our new members."
