Habitat For

Building The Volunteer
Foundation

Habitat for Humanity®

By Chloe Kneer – The Habitat for Humanity Espanola build is underway, but what has been achieved so far is only a drop in the bucket compared to what remains. There is still much work to be done and many hands needed to do it.

Volunteers are the backbone of Habitat for Humanity, and there are roles for everyone who wishes to get involved, including in construction, food service, administration, fundraising and more. On-site workers should be at least 16 years of age (with parental consent), there is no maximum age for volunteers and you can reside anywhere, but still be involved in the Espanola build. With a new year upon us, this is a great time to start thinking about ways in which you can make a difference in the

WEBBWOOD RECREATION COMMITTEE – THANK YOU

December 20th, 2015 was the first Webbwood Recreation Committee's "Caroling for a Good Cause". Over 20 people (adults and children of all ages) came together to carol around Webbwood for canned and non-perishable food donations for the food bank. They collected six cases of food as well as monetary donations which will be delivered to the Espanola food bank. Everyone had a great time and the community really enjoyed all the singing. Afterwards all the carollers got to enjoy a warm-up with hot chocolate, popcorn and other goodies. On behalf of the Webbwood Recreation Committee we want to thank all the volunteers that came out and to the community of Webbwood for their generosity towards such a great cause.

THE MASSEY/WALFORD FOOD BANK WISHES TO THANK THE FOLLOWING FOR THEIR GENEROUS SUPPORT:

Florida's Crime Spree Is Mostly In The Pants

It's not the frequency or genre of crime in Florida - state motto: "In God We Trust ... But That's About It!" - it's the sheer weirdness of it all.

Take Maria Magdalena Montanez-Colon for example. After calling 911 about a sports car that had been stolen months earlier, an inebriated Maria tried to seduce one of the young cops who responded to the call. When the officer rebuffed her advances, Maria then called 911 to file a report on a young male officer who was refusing to have sex with her. Failure to have sex with a drunk is probably not against the law in America, but in Florida, really, nobody knows? (Am I the only one who's thinking big, lusty Broadway musical here? How do you solve a problem like Maria? How do catch a cop and pin him down?) When Maria's complaint went nowhere and she was warned about the misuse of the 911 emergency number, she then called 911 to demand another officer be sent to her home because the one that was there, the one who wouldn't sleep with her, was being rude.

For this and several other convictions involving property and alcohol, Maria spent six months in jail where getting somebody to have sex with you is probably a whole lot easier.

The sad saga of Maria's failure to cop with a cop serves to confirm my theory that half of all the crime in the state of Florida involves the peoples' pants which sounds somewhat democratic until they're pulled down in public, quite often by police.

Take John Balmer, for instance. A clean cut, normal-looking 50-year-old from Pasco County, Florida, John invented a simple yet unique strategy for product marketing. He stood outside the Walmart in Hudson, Florida wearing a promotional T-shirt that read: "Who Needs Drugs?" And in case shoppers thought it was a joke, the subheading on the T-shirt read: "No, seriously, I have drugs."

Police who discovered a substantial amount of marijuana and methamphetamines in John's pants definitely confirmed his advertising claim. The deal was done quickly and efficiently - police got the drugs and John got a request for a $2,150 bail bond.

Now take 25-year-old Robert Stanley Roberts of Manatee County, Florida for example. When police pulled him over in a routine check, they smelled marijuana so they searched his car. Nothing. Then they frisked him and searched his pants. Nothing ... yet. (But you're getting warmer!) Then they search his bum ... BINGO!

Robert Stanley Roberts was found to be hiding not one but two bags of drugs in his buttocks. When questioned, Roberts admitted that the bag of marijuana was his, but he had no idea two families' lives that will be chosen as new homeowners in Espanola (the building project is a duplex). And not only individuals are encouraged to make that difference. In fact, the Espanola build fundraising team is currently looking for local businesses who would like to donate products or gift certificates for their big fundraising raffle. If your business (big or small) would be interested in contributing your product or service, contact Katie 705-677-8872 or Darlene 705-561-6221 to get the details.

If you have a group of co-workers or friends interested in lending a hand, you can pool your efforts to Adopt-A-Day at the building site. Your team of up to ten people will be responsible for collecting $1,000 in donations, then spending a day at the work site, where your signage will be displayed and you will work on the homes. The good thing is, no experience is required! If you do have experience, even better. You will be taught about safety, and be given access to all the tools you will need to make your day a productive one. Habitat for Humanity is also looking for people who like to throw parties to host a Big Night In. If any of these options interest you, just contact Volunteer Coordinator Jody Yusko to get started at jkyusko@live.ca or 705-669-9108.

An informational meeting will be taking place on Monday, January 11 at 7:00 p.m. at the Espanola Legion (right behind the build site). The session is open to everyone who would like to become involved in any capacity.

how the bag of cocaine got there. (And no, I looked it up. The term "crack cocaine" was popular long before Robert's cavity search.)

You know that silly question they sometimes ask at airport security: "Did you pack your own bags?" Well, not so silly in this case. Manatee police are looking for members of a drug cartel that uses men who sleep really, really soundly in order to transport cocaine across state shorts, sorry, lines. An upcoming episode of Murdoch Mysteries starring Gary Busey as Roberts will examine this case more closely. "One Dark And Dangerous Derriere" will air early in the new year. (Seriously, if the word "dumbassery" is on Oxford Dictionary's 2015 list of new words, Robert Stanley Roberts deserves to get credit.)

In DeLand, Florida, 30-year-old Nicole Reed was charged with retail theft after she stuffed seven lobster tails down her pants and tried to walk out of a supermarket called ... folks, I swear I do not make this stuff up and in fact you can Google the in-store surveillance video of this crime ... a supermarket name Publix. Worst in-store joke of 2015? Once chastised, the woman walked away from the seafood department with her tails between her legs. (Okay, for that I apologize.)

Also in DeLand, Florida, 44-year-old Jason Puckett was charged with retail theft when he was stopped by a Walmart security guard, leaving the store with two cow tongues weighing 6.5 pounds stuffed down his pants. As far as police are concerned, Jason Puckett is in no way connected to Nicole Reed and there was no link between these two crimes like a surf and turf backyard BBQ. DeLand, Florida is the only town in the state where check-out clerks in grocery stores ask customers if they need a bag or are they just going to stuff their purchases down their pants.

In Port St. Lucie, Florida, Anthony Ballard was charged with grand theft when ... okay, I'm running out of space here. Google: Florida man $600 chain saw down pants fortunate switch was "OFF".

Sorry, but I stand by my claim that 50% of crime in Florida could be eliminated by selling pants with sealed pockets, welded zippers and belts with locks that come with combinations known only to parole officers.

Memo to Snowbirds headed for Florida: Mind your own business, keep you nose clean and please, make sure you pack your own pants.
