Habitat For Humanity Looking Ahead

By Chloe Kneer - Now that Habitat for Humanity has awarded the new duplex at the corner of Oscar and Adelaide Streets in Espanola to two deserving families, the organization is looking ahead to its future endeavours in our area. On Thursday, June 23, Sasha Leonard and Sheldon Lacasse, along with their children and Angie Scheel and her son, were announced as the new home owners at a well-attended public ceremony at the Espanola Hospital. Thanks to an interest-free, no down-payment mortgage through Habitat for Humanity, the young families will both enjoy affordable homes of their own.

"These families tonight will become contributors to other families," said David Morris CEO of Habitat for Humanity Ontario Gateway North. "They are now among 2,800 families in Canada, 30 in our

The Dead Dog Days Of Summer

Once again, we're into a hot and humid summer. Dog owners should be thinking about canine haircuts, raking their animals for ticks and parked cars that can become ovens in a matter of minutes. Once again, we need to salute the efforts of animal control officers everywhere who are the first to respond to pets in distress.

Once again, it's time to remember Randy. Imagine you're a uniformed officer in the unruly, quicksilver city of slow-driving tourists and fast-shuffling dealers where tourists from as far away as Japan come to watch water fall into a hole named Niagara Falls.

It's a dog-eat-dog world and these are the dreaded dog days of summer and nobody knows this better than you – you're the dogcatcher. It's hot and it's dank and as you wipe the sweat from your face and neck with a handkerchief, the radio on your belt crackles your name and badge number. They've found you again and there's no dodging the dispatcher.

You jump into your truck and you scream loud enough to part curtains all up and down the street. It's not the frustration, but there's that too. No, this time you just sat on that long-tooth, steel grooming brush you thought you lost weeks ago. Your name is Randy, you're a hardworking officer doing an impossible job in an unforgiving city and now you've got a sore bum to boot.

You've rescued eight dogs from as many steaming cars in the last two days alone and this call is yet another emergency in four long years of emergencies in the business of life and death, chase and rescue, cats up trees and dogs crapping on the lawns of cranky neighbours.

It's the same old story with slightly different details: medium-size dog in a red minivan with tinted windows and American license plates. The black windows are down a couple of inches and the Marineland security guys who are now helping you rock the vehicle have no idea how long the dog's been lying there, motionless on the back floor.

No response from the shaking, you go to plan B, the water bottle. But still there's not a muscle moving from the heavy spritzing you're giving the dog.

The yelling, the hollering and the slapping of the sides of the van elicit the same response, which is no response and you're down to your very last option. No time to fetch a slim jim for a clean break-and-enter of the vehicle, you grab your trusty tire iron and you're poised like a home run hitter about to knock the passenger side window into the driver's seat. There will be serious damage for sure but maybe, just maybe, life might rise from the debris.

The window explodes in a thousand shards and your hand finds the door lock even before all the glass hits the pavement. Backup has arrived and John, a man you'd trust with your life, rushes through the door, past the seats and kneels beside the dog on the floor in the back of a van that's an airless oven on a sticky tarmac in a city that's hotter than hell.

A crowd has gathered around the van and though the mood is silent, the moments pass loud with anticipation. They wait as you wait, with hope.

You dash in yourself, you crouch down, touch the dog and feel for a pulse and now it's you that's coming out of the vehicle, white, and silent except for the glass crunching below your shoes. You're shaking your head and cursing when someone in the crowd asks: "Is the dog dead?" You look at John, he looks at you, you both look down.

They ask again and from somewhere comes the strength for you to respond: "It's stuffed."

"What?"

"The dog is a stuffed dog."

And there it is. You're an overworked lawman just doing your job, standing beside a car accident you created with one mighty swing of the tire iron on a torridly hot day in the city built beside a natural flush toilet. Your name is now Mud. At this point two things become quite clear to you. First, contrary to the TV ads, not everyone loves Marineland. And second, you can pretty much forget about that Employee of the Month plaque.

For one fleeting second you consider propping the dog up against the passenger door and putting the tire iron in his hands to make it look as if he tried to break out. But that would be wrong.

Besides, the glass is on the inside and there's too much of it to scoop up and you're out of time anyway because the big American guy with the tattoos on his arms and the keys to the van in his hand is standing there glowering at you. Now his witchy wife is screaming about stupid Canadians and for-sure lawsuits and the little girl is crying: "Mommy! Mommy! They're not going to take my doggie, are they?" You haven't had a day like this since the rottweiler bit you in the ass and the cat you were holding at the time, the one you'd rescued from the top of the telephone pole ... ran back up it.

Your name is Randy and your bum's not sore anymore. It's red.

"Birds I View"

By Bob Rigby - Not quite sure what is happening with the weather patterns, but I can only imagine it is playing havoc with our feathered friends. I was thinking back on summers past, and my evening walks down Centre Street in Espanola towards the golf course. I recall the chimney swifts in groups of six, sometimes 10, flying at incredible speeds at about roof top height up and down, catching insects on the wing. This bird can often be seen high up in the sky zig-zagging in flight, often disappearing from the human eye as they reach high altitudes. Everything about this elusive bird is designed for speed: its wings longer than its slender body, its tail appears as a point in flight, jet black in appearance but really a sooty brown turning to black at the rump and tail area. The birds that frequent the Espanola area arrived back about a week ago, and I have only seen three so far; that's the same as last year. Resembling the swallow family in flight, the name swift best describes this bird, one of the fastest flying birds on earth. Very seldom does the bird come to ground, or is ever seen perching on tree limbs or overhead wires. When it does rest it is usually in a vertical position clinging to a wall or chimney. Most of its life is spent on the wing. Not much of a songster, the sound it makes is more likely to make you look up, sounding like a clicking noise of someone banging a couple of knitting needles together. I have had people tell me that they often confuse these birds as being bats.

area and 3 million worldwide." Family Selection and Partnering Committee Chair Kathy Yusko said, "We build communities and hope. Thanks to the commitment, dedication and passion of our volunteers in getting things off the ground. We use our hands to build a house, but it's a heart that builds a home."

The homes are currently at the drywall stage inside and the families, who must now embark on their 500 hours of "sweat equity," have begun priming and painting. "There is still lots of work to do," says Yusko, "and our hope is that we can turn the keys over by October 1." Between now and then, however, the organization is still in need of volunteers to keep the project moving forward. Adopt-a-days, which have employers and other local businesses volunteering for a full day on-site, are being booked. "We will be constructing fences for the owners and right now, we are looking towards raising money and booking adopt-a-days for that purpose," says Jody Yusko, Volunteer Coordinator. "After that, the priority will be putting up sheds." Other fundraisers are also in the works including a couple of raffles with gift baskets and a quilt. To volunteer, contact Jody Yusko at 705-669-9108 or jkyusko@live.ca.

The chosen families will also consult with the Family Partnering Committee to ensure that they are successful as homeowners. Details such as what to expect on closing day, property maintenance and estate planning will all be discussed.

Once this project is finished, Habitat for Humanity will be seeking land for future builds, both around Espanola and throughout the Gateway North area, which includes Sudbury, Orillia, Gravenhurst, North Bay, Bracebridge and Huntsville. The hope is to construct at least 17 homes in the district. The organization is also seeking and open to other unique ideas for affordable homes, including through its Renew-it program, a project which consists of purchasing existing homes in dire need of repairs and updates, then renovating and selling them to eligible families. Habitat for Humanity is also considering delving into the burgeoning pre-fab market, purchasing homes that are built in climate-controlled factories and shipped and put together at the building site.

Recipe

This is a doctored up, boxed, cake recipe and a great way to end a meal. It's like a cocktail and a dessert combined. It's very similar to the rum cake that I've made for years but with a chocolate/coffee twist. If you are not a fan of Kahlua, you can substitute with Raspberry Liqueur, Godiva Chocolate Liqueur, Grand Marnier, Brandy etc. Don't be afraid to change it up. It's delicious and moist as it is, but if you really want to impress guests, add a dollop of whipped cream and fresh raspberries to each slice.

Triple Chocolate Kahlua Cake

Cake

- 1 box Chocolate Cake Mix
- 1 box Instant Chocolate Pudding
- 1/4 cup Chocolate Syrup
- 1 cup Chocolate Chips
- 4 Large Eggs
- 1/2 cup Oil
- 1/2 cup Water
- 1/2 cup Kahlua

Sauce

- 3/4 cups Strong Coffee (brewed)
 - 1/3 cup Sugar
 - 1/3 cup Kahlua
 - 2 tablespoons Butter
- ### Drizzle
- 1/2 cup Heavy Cream
 - 1 cup Good Dark Chocolate (chopped)

Cake- Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease sides and bottom of a Bundt pan with shortening or oil spray and flour lightly (you can also use cocoa powder because it won't show after baking). Toss chocolate chips in a small amount of flour. Flouring the chocolate chips prevents them from falling to bottom of pan and they stay suspended in the batter while baking. In a large bowl, mix other ingredients together until well combined. Fold in the chocolate chips. Pour batter into pan and bake for 40-50 minutes. Cake is done when toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool cake in pan on wire rack.

Sauce- In a small saucepan, melt butter, sugar and Kahlua. Stir well. Add coffee. While cake is still warm and in the pan, poke holes with a fork. Pour sauce all over cake. It will soak in as it sits. Cool completely then turn out onto a platter or cake plate.

Drizzle- In a double boiler, melt together the heavy cream and chocolate. Stir until fully melted and glossy. (2-3 minutes). Drizzle over top of cake.
