Killer Birds – Don't Let The Feathers Fool You

I feed the seagulls near my house in hopes it'll keep them from trying to kill me. These large, white scavengers that normally hang out at McDonald's have recently been earning reputations as "killer birds."

Last year in England a young boy lost a finger to a gull that was trying to steal his sausage roll. Then a retired fish and chip shop worker, Sue Atkinson from Cornwall suffered gashes on the top of her head after being dive-bombed by several seagulls. Around that same time period, in separate incidents, British gulls were also blamed for the deaths of a Yorkshire Terrier and a pet tortoise. The situation was so bad, Prime Minister David Cameron came out and called for "a big conversation" to be held regarding the seaside pariahs.

Donald Weston wishes they'd held that conversation years ago. Donald was the operator of a car park in his hometown of Gloucester, England who became a prisoner in his own service hut, completely surrounded by one very nasty bird. For five summers in a row a seagull returned to the Wellington Street parking lot to make Donald's workday a living, running-for-cover hell.

Donald believed the seagull which he named the Wellington Bomber, was the same bird he rescued from a nearby park when it was a chick. For his own safety, Donald put the chick in the trunk of his car and as a result the fully grown gull hated him with a vengeance and tried, with all the weapons in his arsenal, to maim him every time he came out of his hut.

The bird spent every daylight moment perched on a chimney overlooking the parking lot and when Donald would appear out in the open, the Wellington Bomber would attack from the air like a fighter jet, bombarding him with vomit and droppings. It's not exactly the millions of tons of bombs the Allies dropped on Dresden back in 1945, but after a while that stuff starts to add up.

The seagull had a hurt on for Donald and nobody else. Regular patrons of the car park were never attacked. And whenever Donald walked through the lot with another person, he was perfectly safe. But when he ventured out alone, anytime of the day, the gull would swoop down low with deadly accuracy, firing from both ends like a Mark 10 Lancaster bomber with a hooked nose cone.

Donald tried just about everything to keep his job and his head dry. For a while he wore a motorcycle helmet but it didn't fool the bird a bit. It just sort of cushioned the collateral damage. Donald even donned disguises but Dead-Eye-Dick, the Wellington Bomber nailed him every time. Then Donald went on a diet and an exercise regime in hopes of outrunning his archenemy, but in the end a bird in full flight proved faster than a Brit on the sprint.

"I was shattered last year when I had to run all over to get away from him," said Donald. "I was limping all over the car park for weeks afterwards."

Obviously Donald was running low on ideas as to how to continue in his job as parking lot attendant without returning home every evening looking like the newspaper that had spent the day at the bottom of the budgie cage. I'm sure he was tempted, but Donald never did put on a seagull suit, taken a perch higher than the Wellington Bomber and inflict the same double barrel punishment on him. In Biblical terms, this is known as "an eye for an eye, a toot for a toot."

Got a puking, crapping seagull on your case? Who you gonna call?

Well, maybe former Blue Jay Dave Winfield who in August of 1983 intentionally threw a perfect strike to hit a seagull on Exhibition Field. The bird died instantly. In the investigation that followed, Winfield was exonerated. Police refused to believe that Winfield's throw was aimed to bean the bird, seeing how he had been unable to hit the cutoff man all season. Or better yet, call Fabio. Sixteen years ago the long-haired supermodel and full-time heartthrob was riding the "hypercoaster" at the Busch Gardens amusement park in Virginia when he was hit in the head by a goose. Fabio was there to promote the park's Apollo Chariot and onboard for the inaugural ride. Hurling toward earth at 73 mph, Fabio was hit in the face by a 10-pound goose. Fabio took the embarrassing accident rather well, appearing bloodied but cool throughout. But the ensuing mockery sort of killed his career.

Somehow I like to think that the bird that tired to take Fabio out was the orphaned son of the bird Winfield killed. Hey! It could happen!

Having read about all this bird stuff, you simply have to feel better about your job. Granted, your boss watches you like a hawk and the people you work with are a bunch of turkeys, but at least you're not being stalked and abused by a schizophrenic seagull who's trying to take the life of a parking lot attendant who saved his in the first place!?!

Rainbow Coalition Raises Flag On Parliament Hill

Carol Hughes, MP
Algoma - Manitoulin -
Kapuskasing

At the beginning of the month, the Prime Minister, members of Parliament and the public gathered on the front lawn of Centre Block to witness an historic event—the raising of the Pride flag on Parliament Hill. Although it was a symbolic measure, the event showcased Canada's commitment to work towards inclusivity for members of the LGBTQ community. I was proud to be in attendance at the ceremony which received the support of all political parties.

This long awaited event was held on June 1 since that day marks the beginning of Pride month - a month dedicated to the acceptance and equality of LGBTQ individuals. For me, Pride month began a week prior, when I was in Elliot Lake to help kickoff that community's 4th annual Pride celebrations.

It has been a significant year for the LGBTQ community and while there are still many challenges, there is much to celebrate as well. For starters, the government has adopted all the language from New Democrat Randall Garrison's bill which will change the Criminal Code to make it illegal to discriminate on terms of gender identity or expression. Garrison and other NDP MPs introduced their legislation several times over the years, but this time is different since it is the first time that the governing party has supported the notion. Now that the government has picked up the legislation, its passage has become a matter of when, and not if. For an MP from the third party in the House, it is a victory indeed.

That said, much remains left to do. In Canada and around the world, gay, lesbian, and transgender individuals still face unequal treatment, harassment and discrimination just because of their gender expression and identity. Part of the answer is the Pride movement which has led to more acceptance and support as it develops momentum year after year.

June Pride month, community Pride celebrations, and the Pride flag-raising on Parliament Hill are important events because they are a testament to the hard work, the passion, and the determination of people who believe in equality no matter a person's sexual orientation or gender identity.

More than recognizing those of the LGBTQ community, Pride celebrations bring out the best in all of our communities. They have the ability to gather people together on a beautiful afternoon- people from different parties with varying ideologies - and bring them together in a spirit of inclusivity to celebrate what makes us similar.

For some, it may just be a flag-raising, and it may just be another month, but these symbols truly matter. These are the kind of symbols that make people more compassionate and conscientious. They are symbols of the real work done every day. The work done that makes an ideal become a law. And the work done to make that law reflective of the value we, as Canadians, place on individual rights, freedoms and equality.

The takeaway is that we can recognize our diversity, remember there's still work to be done, but most importantly celebrate our accomplishments - which are not inconsequential.

CUPE represents over 30,000 social services workers in the Province of Ontario. We work hard to provide care to people with developmental disabilities, providing child care, working with families in crisis and delivering programs such as Ontario Works. Government cuts force cuts to the people we serve. Social service workers are leading campaigns to defend our work.

Recipe

This is the banana version of the two classic recipes, "sex in a pan" and "lemon delight". I have a family of banana lovers, and I'm thinking this is a good recipe to make for upcoming Father's Day dinner. Having fresh bananas in it, it needs to be served the day it's made so that the bananas don't darken.

BANANA CREAM DELIGHT

Crust:

- 2 cups flour
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup macadamia nuts or pecans, chopped fine

Blend flour and butter with pastry blender. Mix in 3/4 cup of the nuts, reserving 1/4 cup to sprinkle. Press into 9x13-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool.

Middle Layer:

- 1 package cream cheese (8-oz)
- 1 cup powdered sugar
- 1/2 container of Cool Whip (1 L)
- 5 bananas

Beat cream cheese and powdered sugar until blended and smooth. Fold in Cool Whip. Spread over cooled crust. Slice bananas evenly over cream cheese layer.

Top Layer:

- 2 packages instant vanilla pudding (3-oz each)
- 3 cups cold milk
- Remaining Cool Whip

Whip pudding with milk and spread over bananas. Be sure to seal all edges. Spread remaining Cool Whip on top. Sprinkle with reserved macadamia nuts or pecans. Refrigerate. Chill several hours to set before serving.

Birds I View

Barn Swallow

By Bob Rigby - My how time does fly, no pun intended. It is only a few weeks ago that we were still experiencing chilly weather, but already mallard ducks are out with their ducklings and the same with Canada geese with goslings everywhere you go. Baby robins and grackles, starlings and a few others are busy with chicks leaving the nest. It is such a short window for our early arrivals, especially waterfowl who must get their offspring reared before freeze up. Mid-June is peak breeding season for our migrant wood warblers. Their tiny window includes nest building, egg laying (usually 4, one being laid each day), incubation on average 10-12 days and chick rearing for 14 days on average. Once the chicks have left the nest, the parents feed their young on the wing, meaning the young are being fed while moving southward. My featured bird this week is the barn swallow and it pains me to tell you the plight of this poor bird that so many of us grew up with. The old saying goes that a sure sign of summer arriving is once you have seen a swallow. For the past 4-5 years, however, I have been conducting my own observation of the barn swallow and its startling decline in numbers. This decline is becoming a major concern to birders. I have spoken with dairy farmers from Espanola north to Hearst, many of them noticing the absence of these beautiful insect-eating birds flitting around the barns and chicken coops. Recently I had a discussion with Mr. Al Secord senior who, when I brought the subject to his attention, took me down to his son's aircraft hangar to show me the empty swallow nest that had been built in previous years. He had no returns last year nor did he have any this year. Many birders speculate that chemical use in the barn swallow's wintering grounds could be the contributing factor to the bird's decline. Last week, I promised that I would write about predators that create havoc amongst our feathered friends. I will instead address this in our next issue. Share your sightings by visiting www.aroundandabout.ca and clicking on Submit News Tip.

It's A Wrap: Sacred Heart Concert Likely The Last At Current School

Sacred Heart Catholic School recently held what will likely be its last concert in the old school gym recently. Students from the jazz and rock bands, along with the choir, performed the year-end show for parents and staff. The evening was particularly bittersweet for the school's arts coordinator Jodi Bourcier, whose grade 8 students were also the first group under her supervision when she took over the program that her mother Joanne Hogarth originally started. "Every year I say that it's hard to see my students graduate," Bourcier said. "This year is probably the hardest yet because I've worked with this group the longest."

The evening ended with students presenting Mrs. Bourcier with a bouquet of flowers to thank her for her countless hours of contribution to the school's music program. If all goes to plan, ground-breaking for the new Sacred Heart/St. Joseph joint school site is expected to begin over the summer. For more pictures of the evening, visit our website at www.aroundandabout.ca.

On dad's big day this Sunday, make a lasting impression on him by taking him on a memorable adventure. Here are some ideas to take your gift-giving to the next level from Mark's, a leader in men's casual wear and footwear:

Fishing

Surprise dad with an early morning fishing trip. He will appreciate being in the outdoors away from the hustle and bustle of life. Plan ahead and research the best fishing spots in your area – perhaps one he hasn't been to before. To ensure he is properly outfitted for fishing, surprise him with a pair of FarWest hiking pants which have eight pockets to store all of his fishing essentials!

Cooking Class

Even if your dad isn't a foodie, attending a cooking class together is a great way to bond with him. You'll learn how to create a meal that rivals some of your city's best restaurants.

Paintball

If he loves an adrenaline rush, paintball is a thrilling activity. One rule of thumb is to have very little skin exposure when playing to avoid injuries, so make sure you both dress appropriately for the conditions. Paintball can be muddy and the sun may be hot, so wear clothing that leaves little exposure to the sun and to the paintballs. Enthusiasts say they recommend something loose and light like a long sleeved T-shirt with a pair of durable pants.

VIP Camping

We are not talking about regular camping here. Spoil your dad this year with a camping trip – VIP style. There are many campgrounds that offer luxury tents and cabins with raised beds to avoid sleeping on an air mattress. Instead of hotdogs and beans, bring steaks and potatoes for grilling on the barbeque. Although this is VIP style, still expect to get a little dirty! To prepare for your trip, bring a pair of hiking boots and a warm hoodie for when the sun goes down.

Football Game

If your dad enjoys being outside, plan a game of touch football with friends and family in your local park. To keep him feeling fresh all day, surprise him with a Denver Hayes T-shirt which prevents moisture from accumulating. Your dad will appreciate taking in the outdoor air and creating new memories with the ones he loves most. For more information on the products mentioned above, head to marks.com.

Students Ask Prime Minister For First Nations Commitment

On June 2, almost 100 post cards and letters were dropped into a Canada Post mailbox en route to Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's office in Ottawa. The Espanola High School First Nations students and staff pictured here are sending a clear message concerning their fellow teenagers on northern reserves such as Attawapiskat

First Nation, "Dear Mr. Trudeau, please don't forget about them!"

Emilly Fleming, Aboriginal Support Worker at EHS stated, "Our EHS students and staff demonstrated their support for Attawapiskat and wrote messages to urge Prime Minister Trudeau to take action on the issues affecting the Attawapiskat community. We thought we would show our support for the people, children and youth in the northern community who do not have access to the same resources as we do, and also to show our PM that we have not forgotten. We are eagerly awaiting our PM's reply as to his commitment to the people."

EHS First Nations students created this initiative to bring a continued awareness concerning the plight of First Nations students on northern reserves in Canada and the deplorable living conditions they are subjected to. It is the hope of these students that Mr. Trudeau will keep this extremely important issue on the front lines of political discussions. Now the students will wait and see how the Prime Minister will reply to their concerns.

Canada Post Strike Advisory

To our readers and clients: With a potential Canada Post strike looming, we want you to know that measures are in place to ensure that your weekly Around&About remains in full circulation. The only communities that will be affected by a strike action are Espanola, McKerrow and Whitefish Falls. While we are hopeful that issues will be resolved before a strike becomes eminent, we are prepared in the event of such an action. There will be several pick up locations in place around Espanola to grab your copy of the paper. You may also download the newest issue of the paper every Tuesday at www.aroundandabout.ca. Our website and Facebook pages also continuously update news and events in our area. Thank you for your continued support!

Clinical Informatics Coordinator

We are currently looking for a permanent full-time Clinical Informatics Coordinator. The successful candidate will play an integral role in the development, implementation and adoption of both clinical and non-clinical health care information technologies. This position will identify work flow efficiencies and best practices as we advance our clinical systems primarily in the Meditech environment. Reporting directly to Senior Management, the Clinical Informatics Coordinator is a highly motivated individual who demonstrates superior technical skills combined with exceptional problem solving and complex project management abilities.

As an innovative and creative leader, the successful candidate will provide guidance on health care informatics trends and opportunities and will lead the implementation of new modules, upgrades and interface requirements in close collaboration with Managers, Clinical teams, Meditech super-users and the Regional Meditech Analysts.

Qualified candidates will have 3-5 years' experience in a health care field and and/or computer field with an applicable post-secondary diploma/degree. Advance skills in business analysis, workflow process redesign and program management is required. Experience working in a Hospital and with Meditech software applications is preferred. Bilingual in French and English and a registered member of a regulated health care professional college would be an asset.

Please submit your resume and cover letter in confidence by June 20, 2016 at noon.
