The Boring Conference – There Isn't Enough Caffeine On Earth!

Have you ever attended a really boring conference? Sure you have. Remember the comedian who began by tapping the microphone and shouting "Hey, is this thing on?" and ended up doing animal shadows on the overhead projector? The hypnotist who put himself into a trance and had to be carried off the stage, stiff as a board and crowing like a rooster? The motivationalist who was treated for third-degree burns after completing "The Mind Over Matter" fire walk on hot coals?

So yes, we've all attended a conference that was badly organized and boring as hell, but who among us has ever attended The Boring Conference? Now in its sixth year, this convention is billed as "a one-day celebration of the mundane, the ordinary, the obvious and the overlooked."

Born out of necessity, founder James Ward of Britain launched the annual snoozefest after the 2010 Interesting Conference was cancelled due to lack of interest. Said Ward: "I was already running a blog called I Like Boring Things and it just felt like an obvious thing to do." Perfect! A man with no life inspiring others to follow his lead. James Ward is also the author of the book Adventures In Stationary: A Journey Through Your Pencil Case. In its review, The South China Morning Post gave the book two out of three stars and in doing so revealed the large amounts of sleep people get in that part of the world. Mr. Ward's other title The Perfection Of The Paper Clip was not reviewed by the Morning Post's book editor who was still in a self-induced coma when the book came out. The conference format calls for 20 speakers giving 10-minute talks on such topics as toast, sounds made by vending machines, bar codes, the BBC's TV program Antiques Road Trip and the Life & Times Of Stephen Harper. (Okay, that last one I made up, but I'll get that on the agenda one of these years.)

The most recent Boring Conference just wrapped up in London and by all accounts it was a huge success that is to say, a massive snorefest. Eleanor Herring had them nodding off in the aisles while she employed excruciating detail to discuss the history of lamp posts. Some in the audience were visually gripped by Tim Steiner's keynote address on the electric hand dryer – especially his killer finale which focused entirely on the Mitsubishi Jet Towel.

If there had been an MVP award that year, Peter Fletcher would have been the runaway winner by sharing his year long record of sneezes with his audience. Details like time, place, date and estimated strength of his sneezes were presented. It's too bad they couldn't find a speaker who talked about the method used to fold Kleenex tissues in boxes because that would have given the sneeze presentation a nice "one/two punch."

Conference evaluations later revealed that those in attendance were particularly captured by Fletcher's sneeze #42.

A few people actually slept while watching Jason Ward assemble a jigsaw puzzle throughout the duration of the conference. And his seven-hour event with bathroom breaks was – wait for it – live streamed to an internet audience at home.

The banner headline of The Boring Conference that promised: "Nothing Interesting, Worthwhile Or Important" did not disappoint. I know what you're thinking, that sounds a lot like the theme of Thomas Muclair's federal election campaign!

So far the organizers have fought the urge to make the convention even more boring should that prove humanly possible ... by letting the presenters talk for as long as they like.

I once followed a speaker who really knew how to wake up an audience. I spoke the year after he did, to the Ontario Community Newspapers Association at the Airport Marriott in Toronto. I was all hooked up with a lapel microphone and battery pack when they warned me that any sound I made would be heard by the audience. The woman assigned to get me on stage was making me very nervous. Every time I moved, she was right there. I went for a glass of water and she was on my heels. Finally, in a whisper, I asked if there was a problem.

Sheepishly, she admitted that last year she was also in charge of the guest speaker and he got away from her. "Got away from you?" Simply put, while she was momentarily distracted, the speaker wired up for sound, went down the hall and into the washroom ... and into a stall. That's right, into a stall.

The first sound that blared into the ballroom shocked the audience into an eerie silence. No tinkling of glasses necessary. After that, chaos erupted in the room as loud, rude noises were met with the collective groans of five hundred people caught between what they thought was a bad joke or a very weird Monty Python routine. The flush was the coup de grace.

This poor woman was still in shock one year later. Of all the ways to open a stage presentation that I have tried, marrying a live microphone to a bowel movement never once crossed my mind. I used that story when I got to the podium. I acknowledged that they were probably a fun-loving group of people and yes, I was there to entertain them but sadly no, I would not go that extra mile for laughter. The Boring Conference? They could use that other guy, now and forever known as the party pooper.

"Birds I View"

By Bob Rigby - This past week abounded with bird songs throughout the area, and when time permits I can listen to them sing for hours. New sightings are the return of the common nighthawk, black-billed cuckoos, mourning warbler, clay colored sparrow and the yellow-bellied sapsucker. My featured bird this week is the rose-breasted Grosbeak, not to be mistaken for our permanent residents the pine grosbeak and evening grosbeak. The rose-breasted grosbeak is a migratory bird that returns every year from its wintering home in South and Central America to its nesting grounds here in Canada. An uncommon bird to the south of us, but now a regular visitor and breeder in northern Ontario. I am currently observing a nesting pair near Loon Lake. There is no mistaking this beautiful black and white bird, about 8 inches in length with a startling crimson red breast. They are marvelous songsters as well. Next week's article will be devoted to nesting birds in our area, and my observations of how our little feathered friends overcome predation from other birds, rodents, snakes, etc. In the meantime, share your sightings by visiting www.aroundandabout.ca and clicking on Submit News Tip.

Rainbow District School Board Hands Out Awards

students always come first. She was nominated for this award by the Webbwood staff when she was vice-principal. As a vice-principal, Cori organized the breakfast club and monthly community breakfasts, planned awards ceremonies, led literacy circles, led community art projects, and worked tirelessly to promote diversity. She is committed to providing athletic opportunities to all students. She encouraged involvement in the SPARK program and organized lunch hour volleyball, along with many staff-student volleyball games. The Webbwood junior and intermediate volleyball teams competed and were successful in a variety of tournaments and championships. System-wide, she shares her commitment to diversity as an active voice on the Equity and Inclusive Education Committee.

One of Pitre's schools, S. Geiger in Massey, was the recipient of the Go Green Globe Award. The school received a Silver level EcoSchools certification with the help of their very active Eco Team, made up of students, staff and parent volunteers. The Eco Team delivers regular eco-related presentations and morning announcements. Students participate in classroom projects, exploring modern energy trends, investigating reusable energy sources, monitoring the effects of pollution on clean water, and examining the use of earthworms to convert organic waste into fertilizer. Students enjoy eco-challenges, including waste audits and litterless lunches, and are often rewarded for their environmentally friendly practices. The entire school community conserves energy regularly with lights out. Apple trees shade the schoolyard, and cedar log garden beds are used to grow vegetables for the school's annual fall harvest feast. Pitre and teacher Justin Spencer, a member of the school's Eco Team, were commended at the awards ceremony.

A.B. Ellis Public School lunchroom supervisor Linda Houle won an Award for Excellence for the impact she brings to students that goes far beyond nutritional breaks. Houle has been a dedicated volunteer for over ten years, demonstrating a genuine concern for student well-being, and enriching the school experience by decorating the holidays, helping at school events and providing extra support with reading and math. In return, she insists that students demonstrate respect and perseverance, qualities that will contribute to their success at school and beyond. She learns the names of students and takes time to talk to them about what is happening in their life. Congratulations to all of our local award winners.

Massey Unveils New Sand Volleyball Court

the Township of Sables-Spanish Rivers Public Works Department for doing the excavation and haulage, and to the Parks and Rec Department for prepping the site, grooming and net installation," said Ropp. The court is open to anyone wishing to play volleyball this spring and summer.

Recipe

I wanted to make a "healthier" than the classic, creamy, pasta salad for supper, and have leftovers in the fridge for my daughter's lunch. I did some searching and came across this recipe. I used whole wheat pasta because that's what we eat when my health conscious daughter is home and it really was delicious. The vinaigrette would also be amazing on a lettuce salad; the spice combination is perfect. You can substitute whatever short pasta or vegetables that you have on hand.

Pasta Salad Vinaigrette

Serves: Makes 6 (3/4-cup) servings.

- 8 ounces rotini
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup white vinegar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons garlic powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon black pepper, coarse ground
- 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon onion powder
- 1/4 teaspoon basil leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon dill weed
- 1/2 cup diced red pepper
- 1/2 cup diced red or green onion
- 1/2 cup sliced cucumber
- 1/2 cup bite-size broccoli florets
- 1 cup of cherry tomatoes, halved

Cook pasta as directed on package. Rinse under cold water; drain well. Mix oil, vinegar and seasonings in small bowl with wire whisk until well blended. Toss pasta and vegetables in large bowl. Add dressing; toss gently. Cover. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Toss lightly before serving.
