Baseball – Best Professional Sport In The Category Of Humour

I'm a happy guy now that baseball season has begun and the Blue Jays are back in town. I'm also greatly relieved that the trading deadline has passed. No other institution generates a stronger example of horsetrading than the world of sports in general and baseball in particular.

In 1989 the Reno Silver Sox, a minor-league baseball club, traded Tom Fortugno to the Milwaukee Brewers for $2,500 and a bag of baseballs. The Calgary Vipers once traded pitcher John Odom to the Laredo Broncos for a bag of bats. The Pacific Suns traded Ken Krahenbuhl to the Greenville Bluesmen for ten pounds of catfish. Not amused, Krahenbuhl went to the mound a week later and pitched a perfect game. In a schizophrenic swap, the 2005 Toronto Blue Jays sent infielder John McDonald to the Detroit Tigers for ... John McDonald, who returned at the end of the season.

Eddie Shore, the wily owner of the American Hockey League's Springfield Indians franchise, prided himself on always screwing the other owners in trades. In one deal, the owner of a Pacific coast franchise could not wait to hear Shore rant and rave at receiving a player who was about to arrive at his Massachusetts office with his arm broken and in a sling. The same West Coast owner was not so anxious to hear from Shore when the traded Springfield player walked into his office with his leg broken and in a cast.

In what many sports fans consider the worst trade ever, Boston Red Sox owner and theatrical producer Harry Frazee sent the great Babe Ruth to the New York Yankees for ... a musical? Although Frazee said little at the time, it is believed he took cash from the Yankees in order to stage the Broadway play, No, No, Nanette. Enough to make a gray horse blush, this trade precipitated the "Curse of the Bambino," which, according to superstition, kept the Red Sox from winning a World Series for eight-six consecutive years, starting in 1918 when the deal was sealed.

What might be the strangest trade in sports history took place at the 1973 New York Yankees spring training camp in Florida, in which players Fritz Peterson and Mike Kekich swapped spouses, kids, cars and houses. Yeah, they traded lives, with wives and everything else, including two kitchen sinks. Only spouses Susanne and Marilyn know for sure who got the best performer in that deal.

One player that the hapless New York Mets would have loved to have traded was Marv Throneberry. Sadly, nobody would take him. Marv was one of the most unpredictable major-league ballplayers to ever pick up a bat and glove. Marv played first base for the 1962 New York Mets, widely regarded as the worst team in modern baseball history, with just 40 wins in a 160-game season. This team was so bad that the manager, Charles Dillon "Casey" Stengel, looked up and down the Mets dugout one day and screamed: "Can't anybody here play this game?" New York City's wonderful slice-of-life columnist Jimmy Breslin wrote a bestseller posing that question as the title.

At practice one day, weak-hitting "Marvelous Marv" was bouncing ground balls off his glove like it was made of solid steel. That's when the legendary manager, seventy-two years old at the time, relieved him at first base. Stengel hadn't played the game in more than thirty-seven years, but he was sure he could still show Throneberry a thing or two. "Stand over there Marvin and watch!"

Stengel barked at the catcher to hit him a ground ball, which he did. The soft roller went through Stengel's legs. (I did mention he was forty-three years older than Throneberry, right?)

"Hit it like a man!" he yelled. The catcher complied and that one went over Stengel's shoulder.

"One more," screamed the manager and that one hit him in the shin before he could quite bend over.

Stengel dropped Throneberry's glove and kicked it across the foul line and as he stomped off the field he yelled back over his shoulder: "Throneberry, you have f---d up this position so badly, nobody can play it!" Practice was cancelled due to unending laughter.

Later, on Throneberry's birthday, Stengel, whose nickname was "the Old Perfessor" eased up on his favourite first baseman. "We were going to get you a cake, Marvin," said the manager, "but, well, you know, we figured you'd drop that too!"

For the sake of comic relief and memorable entertainment, some days players like Marv Throneberry bring more value to their sports than the ones who play the game well. And that's what it's all about, because if you take entertainment out of sports, all you have left are the stats.

Despite the futility of the 1962 Mets – you have to go back to 1899 to find a team with more season losses – New York fans came out in droves. Their total attendance of 922,530 spectators was the sixth highest in the league that year. Who doesn't love an underdog? Today with all the emphasis on winning, a team like the 1962 Mets would be playing to an empty stadium. Along with team allegiance, we've lost the good-natured humour in sports.

Day Of Mourning In Espanola

Workers injured or killed on the job were remembered by their counterparts as part of the National Day of Mourning on April 28th.

Flags were flown at half-mast at Domtar in Espanola and wreaths laid in memory of those who lost their lives.

Each year, thousands of Ontarians are killed or injured on the job or die from work-related diseases.

The national Day of Mourning is held to commemorate them.

Espanola High Hosting Mental Well-Being Activities For Education Week

During the week of May 7-11th, Espanola High School is hosting a variety of activities and sessions for students and staff that will highlight mental well-being. These activities are intended to reduce the stigma surrounding mental and emotional issues, and to encourage students to feel comfortable accessing the supports that are available at school and in the community.

As part of an on-going project, Espanola High School has many activities planned for Mental Health Awareness week, such as lunchtime information booths provided by: Child and Family Centre, Espanola Police Services, Manitoulin Family Resources, Canadian Mental Health Association, Cambrian College, TG Inner selves, Northern Dragons Martial Arts, and other community partners. As well, our team has organized lunch hour activities including Conscious Ink Tattoo sessions (temporary tattoos with motivational and inspirational messages), and an Expressive Art Project. It is with support from community partners (Winkel's, Tim Hortons, Giant Tiger, Wolves/United, Child and Family Centre) that Espanola High School has been able to schedule these special activities for our school community.

News From The Town Hall

By Rosalind Russell - Highway Six in Espanola Getting a Makeover

The Town of Espanola is one of 22 communities across Ontario, which has been approved for infrastructure dollars to repair a major portion of Centre Street. Town CAO Cynthia Townsend says it is good news with the town being successful in its connecting link application for a grant being approved for just over $2.9 million.

She adds the work will address the worst part of Highway 6 - Centre Street on the stretch of highway between Station Rd and Second Ave.

There will be public meetings in the near future for affected businesses and residents to gather more information and address any concerns that they may have.

Townsend says they now have to go to tender and set the actual construction dates.

Slight Tax Decrease in 2018 for Espanola Taxpayers

There will be no municipal tax increases in Espanola.

In the May 1st special budget session, Espanola council listened to presentations by fire, police and library department heads with the three coming back with slight decreases.

Funds were also pulled from reserves to bring the budget to a .09% increase.

Councillor Ron Duplessis, suggested monies from the impending sale of Espanola Hydro be put use to bring in a zero budget and put the rest into the reserves.

His counterparts agreed and council will pass the budget at its regular meeting on May 22nd.

Education levies came in slightly less than last year, so there is a slight decrease in taxes.

Espanola council moves towards ROPs for design of new fire hall

Espanola council held a Committee of the Whole meeting Monday afternoon, May 1st, to focus on a new fire hall.

Council had to first decide whether to keep the number of pumper tankers to two or retain the third, which would have meant having to build four bays in the new hall.

In the end, council decided to only keep two, one which will be new, and the rescue vehicle, so only three bays have to be constructed, guesstimated at a savings of around $160,000 to $220,000 in construction costs by Deputy Mayor Bill Foster.

Council then passed a resolution to have a Request for Proposal put together by staff for a building design of between 6,800 to 7,200 square feet with three bays, three administration offices, washrooms, a training room and common areas.

However, Foster did say he hopes to see plenty of imagination with the designs that come from companies that decide to put together a proposal.

Transition to OPP expected to take place in New Year

The transition from municipal to provincial policing in Espanola will take some time.

In a press release, Espanola Deputy Mayor, Bill Foster, says the loss of provincial grants combined with the costs to provide policing service to a small community like Espanola was the deciding factor in council going with the Ontario Provincial Police.

A full transition to OPP is anticipated to take place by January 2019.

The Town of Espanola and the OPP will have to sign the contract. Once that is done, the two parties and the Espanola Police Service Board will apply to the Ontario Civilian Police Commission for final approval.
