By Rosalind Russell - Two former Espanola High School co-operative education employers were acknowledged at this year's 28th Annual Co-Op Employer Appreciation Luncheon.

The high school guidance counselor, Dean Riggs, says two influential supervisors passed away this year; Dr. John Wu from the T.C. Dental Office and John Rutledge, a former manager at the Espanola Regional Recreation Complex.

Plaques were presented to Dr. Wu's staff and Joel Yusko representing the complex.

Highlights of "The Amazing Raptors Bandwagon Ride"

Oh Canada – what a magical, crazy coast-to-coast Raptor ride it was through 60 urban Jurassic Parks, 36 Cineplex movie theatres, thousands of bars bending the fire code and 7.7 million of us screaming "YES!" at our television sets from the couch.

The two-month Raptors' run up to NBA Championship had Canadians standing proudly in the living room for our national anthem and fist-pumping the rarified air of unity, reminding us yet again that this is the greatest country in the world which we under appreciate and often undermine.

Prior to the Raptors post-season tear, most Canadians didn't pay much attention to basketball. Faster than baseball, softer than hockey and with none of the charm of 'the beautiful game' according to swelling numbers of soccer fans in this country.

But by June 13th seven professional athletes most Canadians had never heard of – Lowry, Leonard, Gasol, Siakam, Ibaka, VanVleet and Green – had their faces on the refrigerators from Victoria to St. Johns.

Today the Toronto Raptors are the greatest professional B-ball team on the planet. So well deserved and historically fitting 128 years since Canadian Dr. James Naismith in trying to get a bunch of chubby kids in Springfield, Massachusetts to break a sweat invented this game with one soccer ball, two bottomless peach baskets and 13 rules ... none of which involved "in the paint," "on the glass," or "alley-oop." "Boardman gets paid." What the hell is that?

Never to be forgotten is The Shot, Kawhi Leonard's buzzer beater that eliminated Philly. Tied 90-90 Leonard, dwarfed by a tree called Joel Embiid threw up a ball on which the sweat of his hands was dried by fairy dust. It hit the rim hard with a big bounce, it hit the rim again with a small bounce, then it thunk! thunked! its way into the netting. An entire country was frozen in time for 3.3 seconds. A basketball fan would call it lucky, a Canadian fan would call it destiny. The path to the championship was assured right there, only the when and the where to be determined later. Highlights, I have a few...

- Folks in Almonte, Ontario, the hometown of Dr. James Naismith pulling a Raptor's jersey over his bronze statue.

- In Cambridge, Nunavut way up in the High Arctic, Raptor fans were wearing T-shirts that said: "We The Real North!"

- A soaked hipster in Toronto's Jurassic Park was photographed wearing a black leather jacket with white letters on the back that read: "Kawhing In The Rain!"

- The unlikely hero Fred VanVleet getting his face smashed by a viscous elbow lost a tooth and needed seven stitches near his right eye was asked by a reporter: "Do you feel more Canadian now? You know... hockey?"

- Note the key phrases in O Canada like "true patriot love" and "land glorious and free" in contrast to those in the US National Anthem like "rockets red glare" and "bombs bursting in air." It's like our anthem was written by a poet and theirs by a four-star general.

- The magnificent rendition of O Canada by The Tenors in Game 1 at Scotiabank Arena that left the Warriors and coach Steve Kerr shaking their heads in awe. When it comes to singing before major Canadian sports spectacles, k.d. lang has competition.

- A tad different than the Game 4 singing of the anthem by Burlington folk band Walk Off The Earth. Most fans later suggested they "walk off the court."

- The excited post final comments of Drake, the official mascot of the Toronto Raptors probably won't get framed and hung from the rafters. "I want my chips with dip. I don't want my chips plain. I want my chips with dip." But it'll likely earn him a TV ad for Frito Lay.

- Old school sportsmanship starred coaches Nik Nurse and Steve Kerr - smart, humble and so respectful of each other. Raptor players helping injured Warrior Kevin Durant off the court. So refreshing was the absence of trash talk and chest-beating bravado.

- Maybe the highest praise a Canadian sports team can ever receive came from President Donald Trump when he ... never tweeted a word.

- The Raptors locker room after the win looked like the front entrance to the United Nations. Serge Ibaka was wrapped in his Republic of Congo flag, Pascal Siakam was wearing his Cameroon flag, GM Masai Ujiri was draped in his Nigerian flag, coach Jama Mahlalela boasting a Swazi flag and Chris Boucher, the only Canadian player was covered in two Canadian flags. In the national game within the international contest Africa outflagged Canada 4-2.

And of course, leaders of both countries would honour the tired tradition of making a bet on the series. U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, a Warriors fan from San Francisco bet a stash of California wine, chocolates, almonds and walnuts. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau waged craft beer, Nanaimo bars, bagels, bison meat and Atlantic salmon. But the day before the final President Donald Trump slapped a tariff on Canadian food products and screwed the whole thing up. Note to Justin: a special place in hell for dealing with the sworn enemy of President Satan. Expect a hate Tweet and a really lame nickname.

- Note the difference in basketball and hockey fans. Traded to Toronto after 11 seasons with the Grizzlies, Memphis fans still worship Marc Gasol hosting porch parties for the Raptor finals. John Tavares, traded to the Toronto Maple Leafs after nine years within New York, Islanders fans on his first night back invited everybody to drive over his jersey in the parking lot and then urinate on it. Which they did.

- Toronto's Leslieville residents put large portrait look-alike signs on their lawns - not of Leonard or Lowry - but Nav Bhatia, the Raptors superfan who has not missed a home game since the franchise opener on November 3, 1995. Nav, an unemployed immigrant who became a millionaire is a billboard for tolerance and the Canadian way. All this amounts to an uncanny closure to the circle of karma that a team with a silly name wearing purple pants could debut in a hockey town and play its games in baseball stadium is now the undisputed champions of the basketball world. There's hope for us all including the Leafs.

Espanola High School Holds 28th Co-op Employer Appreciation Luncheon

Annual Co-op Employer Appreciation Luncheon also shared his co-op experience with the audience.

Ethan Cannard is proud to be a part of the Graduating Class of 2019 and is looking forward to attending Cambrian College in the Heavy Equipment Technician Program.

Cannard says his placement at EPIROC, one of the biggest heavy duty mining equipment suppliers in the world was a great experience.

He says he worked in the component side of the shop where there were components such as axles, differentials, transmissions and so much more.

He adds the experience helped him make the decision to focus on the college program and also taught him great life skills as well.

The luncheon also included a slide show of all the students at their various placements.

It is considered one of the most successful programs of it's kind in Northern Ontario.

Recipe

A delicious fresh berry tart with a buttery, crisp, shortbread crust filled with either fresh blueberries or strawberries, (or a combination of both) and glazed with jelly. The crust compliments the flavour and texture of the fresh berries and is quite easy to make compared to a traditional pie crust. For Father's Day my Mother In Law made the strawberry version and everyone loved it. You can serve it plain or top with a dollop of whipped cream and toasted almonds. It's an impressive dessert that really is quite simple to prepare. You'll definitely want to try it when the berries are in season.

Fresh Berry Tart

Shortbread Crust

- 1 ½ cups of flour
- 3 tbsp icing sugar
- ¾ cup of butter

Filling:

Blueberry

- 2 cups of blueberries
- 10 oz of red currant jelly
- 1 cup of sour cream plus a little brown sugar to sweeten
- 2 tbsp toasted almonds

Strawberry

- 3 cups of whole berries (can be halved horizontally)
- 1 jar red raspberry jelly
- Whipped cream
- Toasted almonds

Use a 9" tart tin. Press shortbread into the bottom and sides of tin. Bake at 400 degrees for 10-12 minutes until golden and allow to cool. If using blueberries: fill shell with blueberries. Melt red currant jelly in a small pot over low heat or in the microwave. Spoon over berries to cover. Spread sour cream mixed with brown sugar, over top without touching the sides. Sprinkle with toasted almonds. If using strawberries, cover shell with strawberries, melt jelly in a small pot over low heat or in the microwave, and spoon over berries. Serve each slice topped with whipped cream and toasted almonds.
