In order to reduce the spread of COVID-19 we have temporarily closed our storefront to walk-in customers. It is important to us that we assist our community in anyway we can, and closing our doors to the public seems to be the most effective way to do our part. We urge the members of our community to do the same and practice social-distancing, as directed by both our provincial and federal government.

With that being said, we want to do our best in assisting our community members who are housebound at this time. We have a large selection of art supplies to keep you busy; including oil and acrylic paints, modelling clay, watercolour pencils, sketchbooks, calligraphy pens, and much more. Individuals may place orders by phone or email, make their payment by e-transfer or manual credit card entry, and schedule an appointment for pickup. Enjoying All Winter Has To Offer

Several students got to see what winter survival is all about. North Shore Search and Rescue, the Manitoulin OPP, local paramedics and firefighters all gathered together on March 5th for the WINTER SURVIVAL CHALLENGE. The students learned how to build a shelter as well as a fire, and what they need to survive in cold weather. AND, some great survival tips. For example, emergency candles are an important item to have in your survival kit: They are great for providing you with hours of light and are more dependable than any flashlight on the market. Candles in a small room or tent can also help provide extra heat. They can help you stay warm during a winter emergency.

Partnering On Dual Credit Course

Cambrian College, Kenjgewin Teg and the Rainbow District School Board have signed an agreement to offer a dual credit course to students.

Cambrian College recruitment director Renee Scott says the course is being offered to students at Kenjgewin Teg and Manitoulin Secondary School, both located in M'Chigeeng on Manitoulin Island.

She adds it is the first time Cambrian has entered into a dual credit partnership with a federally funded education authority while also partnering with a school board.

Scott adds the agreement was signed in M'Chigeeng and the course is now available to students.

Mr. Mirko Bilsic-fix Bell Canada!

I'm sure Mr. Bilsic, as the Chief Executive Officer of Bell Canada, you believe everything is dandy. You have an annual income of three billion dollars, consistent dividend growth and strong capital reserves. You and your board of directors must be spilling Champagne on each other every time you meet. But here's a bit of a different perspective of your company from a Bell customer and a very unhappy one at that.

On Wednesday February 26th I called 1 800 310 Bell to arrange for my Bell services to be moved from my current residence to a new home six minutes away. A male Bell rep from Vancouver had me on the line for over an hour arranging for what I thought was a simple request-switch internet, phone and TV from one address to another. An hour later I'm still yelling the call letters of my new address into the phone. Language was a real problem. He arranged for a noon-to-five internet/phone hook up on the Friday, same time for the TV hook up on Sunday.

And then...he unplugged me. I was two and a half days without phone and internet in the midst of two house closings, lawyers, large cheques and movers. A dozen desperate calls to countless Bell employees pleading them to restore my communications could not reverse the error. If there'd been any glitch in the real estate deals, I would not have known about it and likely lost a substantial deposit.

So early Friday I get the "Where are you?" call. The noon-to-five guy showed up at 9:15 a.m. I rush to the house, give him full access while making trips back and forth between houses. "Don't leave." He worked on the internet for four hours and...left. Nothing worked. Back to 310-BELL many times, many different support staff and nobody can figure out what he did or why it's not working.

The next day, Saturday February 29th another internet guy spends four hours fixing what the first guy didn't finish and I have internet. Until his truck fades slowly down the street and out of shouting range. Back on 310-BELL and I'm begging for emergency help and damned if they didn't send over Pete, who lives in Port Colborne. Within ten minutes I have internet and phone.

Until the next morning when I don't. "Hello--310-BELL?" A guy from the Philippines explains that I have to unplug everything, then replug the small modem, wait five minutes, plug in the big modem and I have internet...as long as I do the "unplug/plug routine" every morning. Although my phone line is working, my fax line is "iffy" and I'm on a deadline to file a column.

Meanwhile the Sunday TV hookup by Francis out of Fort Erie actually works and that night I celebrate by watching 60 Minutes. Also I heard a consistent dial tone on my phone for the first time in five days and I got a little weepy. Unfortunately Francis leaves me with a crappy remote which has dead batteries and a frozen volume button.

On Wednesday, one week since I began the process I have no internet and the plug/unplug system no longer works. That Friday's noon-to-five guy just doesn't show up, I'm now begging Eric, my Bell "case manager" to get somebody to fix the internet but he puts me off until Sunday. I pull the "emergency card" and Eric says he'll call me back in 20 minutes but he doesn't. On the Sunday a guy shows up and says the modems are old and replaces them with new ones. And I have internet. Until the next morning when I have to go back to "unplug/plug routine" for two days. That's when Pete returns and spots the problem between the internet and it's connection to my laptop. But I have internet.

So I damn near break my back repositioning moving boxes so the second TV guy has room to run a line through the garage. The next thing I see is him on a ladder. He didn't go through the garage, he went through the roof. At about the same time as I did.

At one point one of my case managers said "Have you talked to..." I lost it! "I have talked to everybody in this %*#@# company except Alexander Graham Bell!" Long silence. "And you don't know who that is, do you?" His reply: "No sir. I don't know the gentleman." Pity, because he's got a great story about communicating with two tin cans and a piece of string...back when Bell was efficient.

That's when the fax machine died. After an hour on the phone with two tech guys at Beatties, the office people determine the machine is fine but the Bell line is shot. As I'm writing this it's noon on Thursday March 12 and the phone guy just left after replacing my fax line. So after seventeen days, five case managers, a dozen phone staff, nine Bell employees or contractors to the house and probably a total of eight to ten hours on hold with Bell--I'm touching wood with crossed fingers--my communications nightmare might be over! (In fairness, Mirko, your employees are excellent at apologizing!)

Mr. Bilsic, despite the billions Bell is raking in... it is also broke. The largest communications company in Canada is maddeningly dysfunctional and systemically incompetent. You need to fix it. Readers should send their Bell stories to: Mr. Mirko Bilsic, CEO Bell Canada, Central Office, 1050 Beaverton Hill, Montreal, Quebec H3B 5B5. Recipe

Sitting down to write my column this week I can't help but think how important it is that we do our best to stay healthy, not only during this new virus outbreak but at all times. Eating healthy and having our immune system working at its best, is our first defence against many viruses. When someone is under the weather, the first food that comes to most people's mind is chicken soup and there's a reason for that. Studies have shown that chicken soup has anti-inflammatory properties that soothe irritating cold symptoms like coughs, sore throats, and runny noses. The other ingredients in the soup; carrots, celery, and onions, also have antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties. What I love most about this soup is the blend of seasonings. They give this soup just the right amount of flavour to complement the chicken and rice.

Slow Cooker Chicken Rice Soup

- 3 chicken breasts, trimmed of fat and cut in half
- 1 cup parboiled rice (also called converted rice)
NOTE: if you don't have parboiled rice, cook the rice separately and add it to the soup at the end.
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 3 carrots, chopped
- 3 celery stalks, chopped
- 3 garlic cloves, minced
- 2-3 teaspoons salt (adjust to your taste)
- pepper to taste
- 2 teaspoons parsley
- 1 teaspoon thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon rosemary
- 1/2 teaspoon sage
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 tablespoons butter, optional
- 9 cups chicken broth

Place all ingredients in order in a slow cooker. Cook on low for 4 – 5 hours. A few minutes before serving, remove chicken from slow cooker and shred or cut into cubes. Return chicken to slow cooker, and let it cook for 5- 10 minutes more. If you are watching fat content, you can totally skip the butter. The butter gives a little more richness to the broth, but it is not necessary. The soup will taste just as good without it. This soup thickens when it cools. I love leftovers of this soup because the flavors really come out after it sits for a day or two, but it will be a thicker soup than when you eat it straight from the Slow Cooker. If you prefer a thinner soup, just add some water to it when re-heating to give it the consistency you desire.

Declaration Of Emergency Does Not Mean Greater Risk - PHSD

Public Health Sudbury & Districts Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Penny Sutcliffe says the declaration of a state of emergency in Ontario does not mean there is a greater risk of COVID-19. Rather, she says it underscores how seriously everyone has to take the situation with the virus. She adds what it means is that there are more powerful tools and additional measures to prevent the spread and delay or reduce infections. Dr. Sutcliffe says the health unit will comply with the directives handling client interactions by on-site screening and requiring phone pre-screening for anyone who needs testing at one of their sites including Health Sciences North.
