Espanola Woman Writes Cookbook To Support Cuba Mission

By Rosalind Russell - An Espanola woman has written a cookbook to support an annual mission to Cuba.

Jenn Bousquet, a member of Northern Life Church, has produced a cookbook called Daniel Fast Cookbook

Bousquet says she chose to center this cookbook around the Daniel Fast, a spiritual discipline rooted in prayer and intentional nourishment, which features some 50 recipes.

"Last year, I stepped into Cuba with our team a suitcase full of supplies and a heart full of expectation. I left with something far greater—an unshakable calling.

Espanola Woman Writes Cookbook To Support Cuba Mission

"I met people who had almost nothing, yet radiated joy. Their homes were humble, their resources scarce, but their faith? Unbreakable. They prayed and fasted weekly with a hunger for God that humbled me. They didn't just believe in miracles—they expected them. Healing, provision, breakthrough—all through Him, and only Him.

"They asked for so little. And yet, they gave so much: their time, their prayers, their unwavering trust in God's will. "God willing," they'd say—not as a cliché, but as a conviction. They knew that without Him, nothing moved. Meanwhile, back home, we pray and then start making things happen ourselves. In Cuba, they pray and wait. They trust. They surrender.

"That contrast shook me. It softened me. It changed me.

"We've become so accustomed to high-speed downloads, drive-through dinners, and instant gratification. We expect God to function the same way—fast, efficient, on our schedule. We put a time limit on Him: "Whatever You're going to do in hearts today, make sure You wrap it up by noon—I've got other things to do." We give Him so little time, yet expect such big things.

"But in Cuba, I saw what it looks like to give God everything. Time, trust, tears. They wait on Him not because they have no other option, but because they know He is the only option.

"That's why I created a cookbook for the Daniel Fast—to marry fasting, prayer, and Cuba into one sacred rhythm. It's more than recipes. It's a spiritual invitation. Every dish is crafted to nourish the body while awakening the soul. Every page is a prayer. Every bite is a seed sown into a land that has sown so much into me.

"I cry when I talk about Cuba. Not because I'm sad, but because I'm moved. Because I've seen the face of God in the eyes of those who have nothing but Him—and it was enough.

"I don't know all the steps ahead, but I know this: I will keep saying yes. I will keep going. I will keep serving. Because Cuba didn't just change me—it called me."

She released the new book yesterday, the digital copy is $15, the hardcopy, $20, and will take orders through her Facebook site.

Bousquet adds she is excited to return to Cuba in mid-January of 2026.

Mamas lost? Chapter Three

"We chatted and laughed as we started out. It only took a few minutes for us to get into rhythm with each other. "This is easy. It's exciting to do this on our own," said Wanda. "Yah, this has to be the first time I've kayaked without Bob in the stern directing us. It's pretty thrilling, even if it's only four kilometers. Bob is likely more scared of being alone with the grandkids than we are of paddling without him." We giggled, picturing him trying to put up tents with kid help.

As we headed out into more open water it began to get a bit choppy, but we weren't too concerned, as the tandem kayak pretty stable. The wind continued to build and soon we were plunging through one metre waves. I looked ahead and pointed, "look Wanda, the narrows. That will shelter us from the wind and waves. It's a bit closer than Bob described, but it's definitely the first narrows." We eagerly paddled into the opening and glided to a stop.

"Good," said Wanda—my arms feel like they're going to fall off. I could do with a break!" We quietly floated for a few minutes to regain our strength.

"Hmm, this is a pretty shallow narrows. I wonder how Bob got the motor boat through here?"

"Yes, and it's full of weeds. He must have had to lift the motor," said Wanda.

We began paddling again and soon saw the end of the channel approaching.

"There's the sandy shore across the bay, just like Bob had described," said Wanda, pointing. "The lake looks a bit choppy? Do you think we can manage?" said Wanda.

"We've got to. I don't see any phones around to call for help, nor the coast guard to sweep down and rescue us." I pretended to dial my imaginary phone. Giggles erupted from us. "Well, we asked for a chance to prove ourselves. So, let's show some Mama power." Laughing we headed out to meet the waves. It took a big effort to traverse that opening, but we did it. After thirty minutes we arrived at the other side of the bay and viewed with dismay the sandy coloured rocks that lined the shore. Where was the beautiful, pristine sand beach of Aird island?
